MONK SHUT UP AFTER LOVER'S

A Milan girl, Maria Bardelli, has sought the help of the police to rescue her lover, a monk, who, she is convinced, is kept in a monastery "prison" because of his love for her.

The monk, Father Apoilonius, who is 35, served throughout the war with distinction. He was not inclined to resume the monk's habit and entered a commercial firm under his real name, Ernest Alberini. He fell in love with Maria Bardelli and proposed marriage. On the eve of the wedding he disappeared. I was stated that two superiors of his Order, had reproached him for his decision to marry, reminded him that he could not consider himself free from his religious yows, and persuaded him to return to monastic life.

The girl, after much trouble, found him in a monastery near Bergamo, a i not far from Milan. She entered and spoke to him. Unable to resist the fascination of his lover, the monk embraced her and promised to leave made an appointment to meet her i in Milan, but as he has failed to keep it the girl is convinced that he is being detained in his "prison" by the monks.

AMERICAN PROHIBITION.

DRY BRITISH LINERS.

WHAT MIGHT POSSIBLY HAPPEN

From the days of Colonel Lynch, and before, there has always been a strong tendency for United States law to cut the Gordian knots of equable administration, and there is really no reason for surprise at the decision of the United States Department of Justice to debar from entering the three-mile limit any foreign vessel which has alcoholic liquor on board, whether it is under seal or

It is a very nice easy way out or the difficulty which the Association of American Shipowners raised when it was announced that the Prohibition 'Act was to apply to U.S. ships on the high seas. They immediately pointed out that if the order were enforced there would be an end to all the aspira tions of the American people possess a first-class mercantile marine flying the Stars and Stripes. Lack of experience is handicapping them quite seriously enough in their competition with foreign passenger ser vices, but the average ocean traveller who is used to taking his drinks with -or between-his meals has intention of travelling in a ship which he cannot do so. The Government had constantly repeated how anxious it was to encourage the merchant service, if it really wished to do so it must not impose unfair handicaps on American ships. The natural thing to do was to cancel the in which a price was hinted order, but that would have necesmatter of their dignity these days.

officials in it are very touchy in the It must be remembered that it only a comparatively few weeks ago that they felt very pleased with themselves at having obtained from Federal Grand Jury an indictment against all the companies in the breaches of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It was a victory for the law as they saw it, but the rather important point which they overlooked is that had they succeeded and obtained a conviction the next party to be prosecuted must inevitably have been the United States Shipping Board. The Gilbertian situation of one Government department prosecuting another for proceeding to fulfil, in a perfectly fit and proper manner, the functions for which it was instituted, was too ridiculous to be taken very seriously, and nobody much less time when promptly treated. was very surprised when the prosecution collapsed. But the Department of Justice was naturally very sore at the deplorable lack of team work becoming public property and the and you will never wish to be without cause of unlimited mirth, and equally it. It is not suggested that service in such depot ships would be in any way comfortable in winter weather, but the scheme is possible. Only a few weeks ago the Shipping Board received an inquiry for a number of the much discussed wooden steamers which was more than delightful to situted a climb down on the part of them. They replied in due course the Department of Justice, and the and asked what gustantees would be required, mentioning that they certainly would not guarantee them for a three thousand mile journey across the Atlantic in winter. The answer was that they only required them for a three-mile journey in summer, and that they would be moored off Coney Island for North Atlantic Conference for alleged thirsty New. Yorkers to make excursions to by steamer. There is doubt that the whole offer was an claborate practical joke, and that under any circumstances the scheme would be very quickly checkmated by refusing clearance to the ferries, but the scheme is not absolutely impos-

Even then the liner could get any amount of stuff slung across in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, and in the unlikely event of a certain amount having to be dumped overboard the prices obtainable would keep the balance on the right side. More simple is a call at Halifax, and the opinion of the New York interests if shipping companies are forced to do this would be well worth hearing. If liners have to call there they might just as well coal there, and in time quite a large number would make it their terminal port. Of course, it is not in any way comparable to New York, but the encouragement of the extra trade would soon cause improvements. There is the added unpleasantness of ice, and that would not make the proposed measure popular with influential American travellers. They have all a say in the Government.

Altogether it: looks as though the Department has asked for trouble, and the result of the test case which is bound to follow in the near future will be awaited with the greatest interest. The Department of Justice has the power to make the order, but it is always liable to be upset in the courts by the first case brought under it. There is no redress for the unfortunate individual who is prosecuted, but that cannot be helped. A week or so at the outside should see the matter settled. And if it is settled in favour of the order the fun will be only just starting.

CORONAT THEATRE

THE SACK OF ROME.".

"The Sack of Rome," the wooderful historical film which has made such a deep impression on local kinema patrons, continues to draw capacity houses at the Coronel Theatre. There is only one verdica on the splendour of the medieval pageantry and the realism of the wonderful battle scenes. Both are magnificent and worthy of the producer of the now only less famous "Quo Vadis." In addition to the story of the epic events so wonderfully portrayed, is a delightful love theme which contrasts admirably with the dark undercurrent of intrigue that ends in the sack of Rome-a terrible but magnificent spectacle. Appripriate music by the Coronet Orchestra, with Mr A. Scheninam at the piano, adds greatly to the enjoyment of this film masterpiece. The usual topical budget; and comedies complete a programme of unusual merit.

FORGERS "SWINDLED,

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.

BOGUS GOLD FOR FALSE NOTES:

An amusing double case of diamond cut diamond came to light in a forgery trial in Berlin. The defendants were charged with turning out large quantities of imitations of the fiftymark note of Nov. 1918, which lent itselfadmirably to falsification and has consequently been called in. . More than 11,000 of the notes made by the gang were intercepted at the counters of banks, post offices, and other public institutions, but that was a mere trifle in comparison with the output, which amounted, to a million marks a week. The defendants, however, found, as they thought, a magnificent opportunity of getting rid of their forgeries on the wholesale scale. In a cafe frequented At the approaching Annual General by illicit traders they met a couple Meeting of Shareholders, the Directors of Russians, who let out that will recommend that a dividend be they were trying to get rid declared for the past half year at the of forty pounds of pure gold rate of 14 per cent, per annum and a which had come into their hands. bonus of 6s. 3d. per share free of in- Very soon the two parties came to come tax, that £100,000 be added to terms as to the price. The forgers then shared out the booty, weighing it on kitchen scales, and set off to turn it into genuine notes. Much to their chagrin, however, each one of them, when he presented his precious metal to dealer, was told contemptuously that it was only brass.

SUNDAY THEATRE

MR. SHAW'S VIEWS

UNEXPECTED AGREEMENT.

A correspondent writes in a Home paper that he does not remember Mr. Bernard Shaw ever doing better business with his famous common sense masked as irony than he did at the denate on the opening of theatres on The question had been solemnly discussed by "Sabbatarians, and anti-Sabbatarians, when Mr. Shaw got up and addressed the delighted actors and actresses on these ines :---

'It would be a splendid thing for me. The more performances the more fees, and that would be a splendid thing for the managers and for the landlords, and for everyone who runs the theatre for a commercial business." (Mr. Shaw brushed aside with contempt the notion that Sunday theatres would be anything but commercial.) "But," he went on in effect. "if you actors and actresses consent to work on Sunday without proper equivalent I shall continue to think as meanly of your political intelligence as I do now."

The storm of applause that greeted this was such as to embarrass Mr. Shaw, who is not used to people agreeing with him, and usually does not like it. But it was too late then for him to make another speech.

A WEIRD EXPERIENCE.

WEBS 10-PT, LONG IN WAREHOUSE

A dockside worker has had a weird experience in a warehouse where a large consignment of rubber from Para (the Brazilian seaport on the Amazon) was recently stored, wires the Liverpool correspondent of the Daily Chronicle,

Shortly after the arrival of the rubber he discovered what looked like several net hammocks.

With the aid of a lamp he investigated, and found webs with a filmy mesh about two feet broad and from tix to ten long. Brushing them down, he was stopped in alarm by eyes peering from a hole in the wall." Unnerved by his experience, he van from the warehouse and told his story to some of his comrades. They returned with him in time to that a chase of what they declare to have been a gigantic spider, evidently rought in the rubber cases from the haszon. The chase was an exciting but the spider escaped, the buxes Frubber impeding his would he plans which he instinctively knows prove barren of result. In Kwangtung, there are many weak, struggling enterprises which could become flourishing industries sufficient capital were invested in in them, says the Conton Times. The Government has many plans under consideration for the development of Kwangtung's natural resources, none of which can materialize without an investment of wood kicked off for the Rest who capital. Railways must be built. roads constructed, mines developed, and fields put under cultivation before the earth will yield her increase and the people can be blessed with prosperity. The new Municipality needs funds before it can inaugurate its programme of improvements. On every hand, the crying need of the hour is for sufficient funds with which to start the wheels of progress in motion.

Whether this capital be obtained! from Chinese or Foreign sources is immaterial. The basic principle remains the same. Those who are invited to invest capital must be given a reasonable assurance that they will receive a satisfactory return for the amount of money so invested. Capital is unusually timid. Conditions China have not been conducive to the stability of such investments.

We, Cantonese, must face facts. It is impossible to get something for nothing. Investors are not going to put money into Kwangtung enterprises simply from altruistic motives. There are a hundred and one different demands for capital in other parts of the world where the attendant risk is less pronounced and the prospects of large profits equally alluring. Unless Canton is ready to deal with business concerns on a business basis, we fear the present plans for reconstruction will continue to remain just plans and nothing

The Government should turn ace of flint against the concession grabber, the franchise monger, and the monopolist. Monopolies throttle ogress, and should not be tolerated. The interests of the people should be duly protested so the natural heritage of future generations will descend to them free from incumbrances and immortgaged. If such improvedepends upon the introducof foreign capital, then the government is fully justified in accepting such aid on the best terms. it can arrange, and as a business! transaction. The Government can control the development of Kwangtung and make acceptable terms which will give the investors a reasonable profit. How long this will remain true, it is difficult to say for the union of the country may result in less favourable
